

Robert Bacon
Adjunct Instructor

Robert Bacon is an adjunct instructor for the NW3C. He is the president and founder of Huxley Orion, LLC. Robert has a combined experience of over 30 years as a police officer of a special operations unit for the Costa Rican Government and as a U.S. Army infantryman. He also worked for the New York National Guard Counterdrug Task Force as a criminal intelligence analyst, specializing in counter-threat finance and money laundering investigations in support of the NYPD's Narcotics Intelligence Unit and the Drug Enforcement Administration's Financial Intelligence Unit based out of New York-New Jersey High-Intensity Drug Trafficking Area.

Robert is a proven leader in training financial and counter-terror investigations and is experienced in addressing the interfacing and understanding between law enforcement agencies, intelligence units, financial intelligence units, financial regulators, and financial institutions regarding financial security operations, incident response, and vulnerability management. As a U.S. native who moved as a child to Costa Rica, Mr. Bacon has an in-depth understanding of Latin America and the Caribbean Threat Finance regulations and historical and emerging threat trends in Central and South America. He is an adjunct professor at Utica University in New York and teaches courses focusing on economic crimes. Robert brings a real-world perspective to the training.
