

John Weakland
Chief Information Officer

John Weakland is the Chief Information Officer at the National White Collar Crime Center (NW3C). John's Information Technology career spans over 30 years working in various industries. Through continuous formalized information technology, leadership, and project management training through Microsoft and CompTia, as well as a Bachelor of Administration Degree from Virginia College, John has established a proven track record of delivering on key information technology projects supporting businesses' strategic technology roadmaps.

John joined NW3C in 2017 and was previously employed by a large petroleum organization serving as the IT Director managing a team that supported over 300 regional sites. John's areas of expertise across IT infrastructure, SaaS solutions, VOIP, and applications include system implementation & management, best practice security and control measures, and continuous process improvement and innovation.

