Tova Zussman
eLearning Developer

Tova Zussman is an eLearning Developer at the National White Collar Crime Center (NW3C). She develops self-paced and instructor-led courses for law enforcement professionals. She is skilled in user interface design, graphic design, online development, and technical writing. Tova collaborates with subject matter experts (SMEs) to present educational content in a straightforward and user-friendly manner.

Prior to joining NW3C, Tova developed online courses for several national and international universities and government entities. Her previous work experience includes textbook design, web design, creating marketing materials, and design for print.

Tova's formal education includes training in graphic design, web development, and instructional design. She earned a Bachelor of Arts from Thomas Edison State University.